COME, STOP YOUR BLUFFING.

Desire THE EVENING WORLD's liberal offer of our extended evening edition, with a personal and valuable testimonial, will initiate this cheerful legend at the head of its editorial column:

The circulation of THE EVENING SUN is larger than that of any other evening paper in the United States.

The non-acceptance of our friendly offer, however, tends to disprove the statement, and it is our duty to point out the fact that the circulation of THE EVENING WORLD is at least 25 per cent. greater than its own.

But we will not mean about this matter. The "Evening Sun" shall have another chance. The offer is revised as follows:

THE EVENING WORLD hereby agrees to pay $2,000 in cash to the Press Club's charity fund, upon thorough examination, its bona fide circulation is not found to be every day in the week at least 30 per cent. larger than that of the "Evening Sun"—three prominent advertisers to be the judges.

And, if this generous offer is not accepted within the constitutional limit of ten days, we shall increase the percentage again.

IT IS BASED ON JUSTICE.

No bill ever came up for consideration in the Legislature with stronger backing than the act to amend the Children's Commitment law which will be called up in the Assembly to-day.

The principle of this bill is founded on appeal to the prejudices of no creed, nationality, politics or social condition. Black and white, bond and free, rich and poor, Democrat and Republican are alike interested to see that their children have under the laws of the State the right of a hearing, the right of appeal, which the fundamental law of the land guarantees to all its citizens.

The Children's Bill is based on justice, on the principle of fair play, on the idea that right should be done for right's sake.

It is not better that the autocratic privileges of ninety and nine bureaucratic societies should be reasonably abridged, than that the rights of a single helpless infant should be strangled in charity's red-tape?

Oh! old-fashioned justice is a big argument yet!

THE CASE OF JANITOR PROST.

Does nobody intend to do anything about that poor German janitor, Prost, who was done to death while he was "down" by Policeman Lavin's club?

Because he was poor, because he has no influential friends, shall his fate be passed over in silence?

We call this case again to the attention of the constituted authorities. It needs investigation.

WE REVOLVE FOR ALL.

The town was much amused yesterday by THE EVENING WORLD's unique enterprise in printing its late Extra on green paper. It was a novel hit that not only our friends of Irish extraction but everybody else highly appreciated.

As stated editorially, the edition was "a passing compliment to Saint Patrick."

But THE EVENING WORLD with singular enterprise would be glad to honor the patron saint of any other nationality.

THE EVENING WORLD admires and believes in patron saints who by their lives and achievements personify the high aspirations of the justice-seeking and liberty-loving people of any land under the sun.

THE EVENING WORLD stands for the welfare and advancement of humanity in its broadest sense.

MUNDANE MATTERS.

Too much credit cannot be given Mrs. Annas-Parsell for living in New York a hundred years without ever being run over by a street car, robbed by a dog-catcher, poisoned by oil fumes or clubbed by a "cop."

Hope springs perennial, also perkewy and peridial, in the breast of Mr. Stone, of Chicago. After having finished a 3,900 mile jaunt after a murderer, it might be supposed that the son-in-law of the late Amos T. Russell would be willing to sit down and rest. Not so. He has "another clue, more valuable than any he has yet investigated." Mr. Stone ought to be a good man to send after the North Pole.

N. B.—He is now after Tascott.

Mrs. Louise Howell, the vocalist, has composed a song to Baby McKee. Nobody has met a baby or a shad-bait after Baby McKee yet.

The perils of the streets of New York are assuredly not to be sneezed at. Mr. Edward F. Crosby was nearly run over by a coachman yesterday, and Miss Hannah Kelleher is in search of two young women who saw her thrown from a balcony car. There was talk, in a former day, of "little tin gods on wheels." Just now the old Harry might seem to be on wheels.

Sororists are in town. All hail, Sororists! They're promading up and down Without a single bean, viz: They are free, white and twenty-one, Go to for harmony—and for fun, They dine on milk, a tart and bun, And chat of trichinosis!

The guest of the Fellowship Club last night and of the Authors' Club to-night, Mr. James Russell Lowell, should not, during his visit to New York, neglect the woman's clubs, of which there are now "in our midst" more than enough to arm a broom-brigade. Among the most highly-prized conundrums of the elder day was one that declared "a woman's club" to be "a broomstick."

"THE MARQUISE" AT THE LYCEUM.

From "Sweet Lavender" to "The Marquise" was a leap with a vengeance! But it was a very nice one, for, though the delicate organisms of many of our play-goers refuse anything stronger than milk and water, there are those who look upon that mixture in the unpoetic light of "slops." And "Sweet Lavender," though pretty and pathetic, became sloppy on intimate acquaintance.

"The Marquise" has certainly suffered a deep wrong at the hands of the milk-and-water herd, who took hold of Barlow's play, "Ferroel," adapted it and said "I can produce it, but it must be produced." Now production has weakened "The Marquise," for the reason that it has rendered the actions of the heroine, Helene de Fontange, incomprehensible. In fact, Helene de Fontange, to behave as she did, could hardly have been sane. You see it is scarcely possible to handle a French play and say: "You shall have what is good, and I'll cut out what is bad."

The good and the bad are hopelessly blended. Take the effervescent champagne and see if you will like what remains.

The story of "The Marquise" deals with the anguish of a young fellow who has seen a murder committed and the wrong man convicted, while he does not dare to set matters right, because, by doing so, he will compromise the Marquise, who is the wife of the President Judge, Rodolphe de Chamey and the murder from the terrace of the Marquise's room, and feels that he will compromise her if he tells this. In the original French the young man was violently in love with the Marquise and had been illicitly visiting her. His subsequent anguish and her despair at after events are entirely intelligible. The man and woman have since met and retired to the country.

In the Lyceum version, however, this heroic young man simply handed her some old letters that have passed between him and boy and girl. He does not care for her now particularly. She is in love with her husband.

No innocent woman would have believed as she did, and you have either got to believe in her innocence or leave the Lyceum Theatre. That house must be spoiled.

Don Frohman says it. Three words with a loving, indulgent husband would have set the Marquise right. You will, therefore, see that a play the strength of which must depend upon the omission of three words is somewhat eccentric. It is impossible to sympathize with the Marquise. She was either a fool or a lunatic.

The English adaptation of Barlow's play is utterly weak, but the work of the French author is a masterpiece. "Ferroel" is an admirable piece of construction, with the strong scene deftly placed in the last act. This last act is marvellously potent. May I be forgiven if I couldn't help wishing last night that the Marquise had really shown, so that this magnificent scene might be absolutely intelligible.

Enough of the play itself. "The Marquise," I hear, was only produced in order that the members of the Lyceum company might have an opportunity to "act." This they were afforded, and splendid were the results. From this day forth—I register it as a vow—I shall say nothing more about Keley's trousers, or his hat, or his gloves, or his walking stick, or anything that is Keley can act. As the Marquis d'Aulal, President of the Court, Mr. Keley contributed a performance that was really a gem. The methods of the artist were his. The expression upon his face during the trial when as Judge he heard the name of the woman in the case, and as husband realized that she was his wife, was perfectly convincing. Keley's performance was the feature of "The Marquise," and no company could have shown more brightly in the play than did the Lyceum people.

Miss Cayvan was most acceptable when quiet. She cannot successfully do hysterics. She is too rapturously disposed. Effie Elliser is one of the best of the historical ladies of to-day. Miss Cayvan, during the trial scene, was very jerky. Her work is a curiosity almost worth seeing. Miss Fara Leslie was extremely unpleasant. Her lamentations set my teeth on edge, and she lamented fearfully often. Mr. Whittlesby, as a young man of the period, was unconsciously amusing. I have never before seen legs so much in evidence. This youth ought to have a kick taken in that impetuous, untamed, and wild.

THE PIG CHASERS.

Many Aspirants for the Title of "Champion Pig Driver."

Challenges Issued Plentifully for Love or Money.

Two Claim a Record of Less Than Three Seconds.

[[This morning's mail brings forth numerous claimants for the title of "Champion Pig Driver." The best record being 3 1/2 seconds actual time. The best record being 3 1/2 seconds actual time. The best record being 3 1/2 seconds actual time.

As many of the records given fall far beneath the best time submitted, only a few of the letters are presented, the writers of which feel entitled to the dignity of champion.

In two of the letters received the writers make the remarkable claim that they have penned the pigs in two and two and one-quarter seconds.

Mr. John A. Carroll, who disputed the records sent to this office and challenges any one to beat his time of fourteen seconds, has met with prompt response, and a match may be looked for.

Other letters contain various records, and with few exceptions the writers are anxious to meet an antagonist for money or honor.

An Astonishing Record. To the Editor of THE EVENING WORLD: I think that I can claim the record for pig-chasing, my record being 2 1/2 seconds actual time. The best record being 3 1/2 seconds actual time. I break it easily by 1 1/2 seconds. Here is Herrmann, Chauncey M. Depey and our friend Kellar now? 349 Hudson street, Brooklyn.

This Is Still Better. To the Editor of THE EVENING WORLD: I have tried to solve the puzzle, which is now all the go. I practised it until I can do it in two seconds with four pigs. EDWARD HARRIS, 455 Third Avenue.

Herrmann and Kellar Challenged. To the Editor of THE EVENING WORLD: I think I can do the puzzle about as quick as any one, and I hereby challenge the party who claims to have made a record of eight seconds in solving the Pigs in Clover puzzle to a pig-driving match, in the presence of THE EVENING WORLD editor, for any amount of money. I do not bar Kellar or Herrmann. H. D. LYONS, Hastings-on-Hudson.

Another Challenge. To the Editor of THE EVENING WORLD: I will challenge any rattle-dazzle puzzle solver that I can pen four pigs in nine seconds and six pigs in forty-five seconds. You will confer a great favor by giving this space in your brilliant paper. H. D. LYONS, Hastings-on-Hudson.

He Means Business. To the Editor of THE EVENING WORLD: I have a man by the name of William Hohn, who is open for a challenge to the amount of $100 up to $400, for putting the pigs in the pen. He has done it in less than five seconds. 50 Washington street, Hoboken.

Good for Freddie. To the Editor of THE EVENING WORLD: I drove the pigs in the pen in just seven seconds. My father timed me. FREDRIK LOVELL, thirteen years old, Mount Vernon.

Carroll's Challenge Accepted. To the Editor of THE EVENING WORLD: Mr. John A. Carroll, who signs himself the champion puzzle solver of the Sixth Ward, afternoon at 3 o'clock at the office of THE EVENING WORLD, has accepted my challenge. I will have to take his life $50. I can do it in nine seconds. Man and money at Standard Museum. A DIAMOND.

If Mr. Carroll is desirous of keeping to his challenge of yesterday, THE EVENING WORLD will provide the puzzles, referees and time-keepers, and appoint a meeting for Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the office of THE EVENING WORLD as mutual ground. Now, gentlemen, what do you say?—E. N.

Hopes to Reach Five Seconds. To the Editor of THE EVENING WORLD: I can pen them pigs in from seven to eleven seconds every time, and with a little more practice I shall be able to pen them in five seconds, as I have already done it once. I am prepared to challenge anybody for the championship or a prize, leaving out Magnusson, Herrmann and Kellar. FRED JOSEPH, Deer Park, L. I.

An Armless Man Solves It. To the Editor of THE EVENING WORLD: Mr. R. L. Diskow, of Tronton, who had both his arms blown off by a premature discharge of a cannon at the National Guard Encampment at Manassas some two or three years ago, succeeded in putting the pigs in the pen in one minute and fifteen seconds. He has the puzzle placed between his knees, and uses them instead of hands.

ANOTHER GOOD RESOLUTION. The Workmen's Independent League Urges the Children's Bill and Other Matters. To the Editor of THE EVENING WORLD: At a meeting of the Workmen's Independent League Sunday afternoon at Artz's Hall, 303 Third Avenue, resolutions were adopted congratulating THE EVENING WORLD on the bill it is pushing, giving parents the right to appeal against the children's bill, and urging that while the rich were gaining wealth and strength at Summer resorts the people should be allowed to enjoy their own property while it is still in the hands of the people.

JOHN R. CAMP, Chairman.

A Great Artistic Triumph. To the Editor of THE EVENING WORLD: M. Blenheim, a man dreamer. This is the proudest day of my life! Admiring Wife—What new honor has been heaped upon you? "I attended a dress rehearsal at the Fashion Theatre and I was so impressed that my dresses added better than worth."

In Paris. Impetuous but Enthusiastic Collector—Let me see, what is the price of that picture? Art Dealer—Eighteen hundred francs, madam. Impetuous but Enthusiastic Collector—Eight hundred francs? Why, this is the third time I have asked the price of that picture, and you have not changed your mind. Art Dealer—It is a picture of a man with a very large nose, and it grows older every day.

CAPTURED FOR TAMMANY.

THE POTENT JEFFERSON CLUB SCOOPED BY THE WILLY MCCARTHY.

Tommy Shells Was Taken In by the New Congressman and Now the Two Leaders Are at Daggers Drawn—McCarthy Says the Wigwag Gets the Patronage and Independent Jeffersonians are Scarce.

The days of the Jefferson Club as a potent factor in the politics of this city are numbered. For years this independent political organization has dictated the nominations and determined the election of officers in the Fourth Assembly, the Sixth Senatorial, and the Eighth Congressional District.

Ex-Alderman Tommy Shells, of the Boodle Board of 1884, has been prominent in the councils of the Jeffersonians and considered himself dictator of the action of the Club.

Another who has a very strong pull with the members of this historic organization is Congressman John Henry McCarthy.

Tammany Hall recognized the little Judge's strength in the last campaign and cleverly used him to disrupt the independent political Club which has for years resisted all of the efforts of the Wigwag to get a hold in this section of the east side.

Judge McCarthy was made a feathered brave of the Tammany tribe and was then given the Wigwag nomination for Congress against Tim Campbell.

Tommy Shells saw the danger which threatened his Jefferson Club through the action of Tammany Hall in adopting Judge McCarthy and objected to McCarthy's identification of himself with the Fourteenth street camp.

The little Judge was clever enough to allay the alarm of the ex-Alderman, however, and received the full support of the Jeffersonians.

After his election Dictator Shells, who was very complacent over the result, thought he could not do better than to put his hand to the growth in importance of his independent political machine.

He suggested this to the Congressman, who was not very cordial in his endorsement of the ex-Alderman's views.

The relations of the two leaders became very strained and ended in an open rupture at the club-room, corner of McCarthy's street East Broadway, Saturday night, when Congressman McCarthy flatly told the ex-Alderman that he proposed to use all his influence and patronage to advance the interests of the Wigwag and the Jefferson Club can look out for itself.

The Congressman has a large personal following in the Club, which will follow him to the bitter end. At the same time the Tammany organization, and Tommy Shells is expected to be left alone and disconsolate as officers and members of the once formidable Jefferson Club.

WORLDLINGS. President Harrison is said to care but little for flowers. He finds that the perfume of roses makes him sneeze.

It is not expected that President Harrison will burn the midnight oil over his work. He usually breakfasts at 8 o'clock, and it is a rare thing for him to remain up later than 11 o'clock at night.

Mrs. Wanamaker has four children, two sons and two daughters. The eldest son is twenty-six years old. He is a banker, a writer, a lawyer, and has built a church in his memory at a cost of $30,000. Mrs. Wanamaker herself is about fifty years old.

Secretary Rush was at one time commander of the Department of Wisconsin of the Grand Army of the Republic, and has always been a prominent figure at their national encampments. His staff was always composed wholly of one-armed or one-legged veterans.

THE DUTY OF DEMOCRATS. S. S. Cox gives his idea of it in a letter to the Stickler Association.

At a meeting of the Stickler Association last night eighty-five more new members were enrolled in its ranks. It was reported that S. S. Cox had volunteered to add a valuable collection of books to the library of the Club for its new house, and the following letter from him was read and received great applause.

To the President of the Stickler Association: After the excitement of the St. Patrick's demonstrations, may I not be permitted in a solemn way to express my delight at the cool, calm, determined way in which the Democracy has met the challenge of the Stickler Association? It is a source of perpetual pleasure to me personally to see the Democracy of this city and of the Nation as a whole, united in the face of the Stickler Association. I had your splendid adventure into the Stickler Association, and I am proud to have been a part of it. I am proud to have been a part of it. I am proud to have been a part of it.

Permeates Street Influences. To the Editor of THE EVENING WORLD: I noticed the article in THE EVENING WORLD signed A. I. Bowden, an Englishman, and believe it deserves comment.

I am not well versed in the ways of the conducting of criminals in England, but believe we have the very best methods in the world in New York City, and I would like to call the attention of Mr. Bowden to the fact that we have a very good system of dealing with criminals. I am proud to have been a part of it. I am proud to have been a part of it. I am proud to have been a part of it.

There is a very little thing I will make fine faces for: A man's straw hat lies near the spring—Not dropped there there by me. That's the year's ago! How chances mock! I'm growing bald, and she is polky fat, with an infant flock Not owned by me.

THEY SOLD LIKE HOT CAKES.

UNPRECEDENTED DEMAND FOR OUR GREEN SPORTING EDITION.

The Newborn Jammied Theatre Alley to Get Them—They Cashed Checks for $60,000, and Wanted Many More—A Wall of Wee from Those Who Failed to Secure Them Before the Supply Was Exhausted.

Run! Crowd! Jostle! Struggle! What was the hubbub?

Why was it that ten thousand boys, each yelling like ten thousand, filled Theatre Alley from its middle clear out to Beekman street last evening from 4.30 to 6.30 o'clock?

Why was it that they swarmed into the alley and poured out again with an eagerness and energy that only the business boys of the streets possess?

When they came out they bore big and little bundles of green paper, and they shouted lustily: "EVENING WORLD Sporting Extra; buy the green paper!"

In deference to that large portion of the people of New York who were commemorating St. Patrick's Day, and as a souvenir of the day, THE EVENING WORLD had published its Sporting Extra on green paper.
